MIXING

Mixing is the art of blending together and balancing multiple recorded tracks using a mixing console and Digital software. It involves using equalization, compression, tuning and a variety of other harmonic tools to balance the sounds together. The end result is a two-channel, stereo performance. We can also enhance, reduce noise, mix and edit files that were pre-recorded by you or by another studio. After recording your tracks, mixing is the most important step in making a song.

MASTERING

Mastering refers to the process of taking an audio mix and preparing it for distribution. The goal of mastering is to correct mix balance issues and enhance particular sonic characteristics. A good mix is taken (usually in the form of a stereo file) and final touches are put on it. This can involve adjusting levels and general “sweetening” of the mix, including the use of various filters. If you think of mixing as building up the layers of a cake, then mastering is the icing on top.
